As we enter the Summer months, vacations, etc., we want to remind members to try and maintain their donations. You can send them to the Church at Box 2, Hayfield, or go online and make the contribution there. We are behind for the year at this point, so maintaining your contributions is important to the Church

- Thanks,
PFP Committee

FROM THE PASTOR'S OFFICE

I've heard that you only turn 50 once in your life, so I thought that might be a topic worth writing about for the Summer of 2026 newsletter. So let's go back to when I was born a few hours after church on Sunday, May 30th, the weekend of Memorial Day. Mom and Dad didn't make it to church that Sunday, but my 3 siblings still went with grandparents. I mention this because it demonstrates what kind of commitment I was raised with when it comes to attending church. Even vacations were not an excuse, and so we would find a place to visit for worship.

I don't have room to list all my church activities, but basically when the doors were open, the Vander Waals were at church. (Sometimes even when the doors weren't open since my mom was the janitor for a good part of my childhood.) This all gave me a very strong foundation in my faith, not to mention a good amount of ice cream from rewards for memory verses.

I was then off to Iowa State with quite a few strong convictions about what was right and what was wrong. You might say I had an overly intense moral compass which might have been exaggerated by the fact that I had a diagnosis of Obsessive Compulsive Disorder as a teen. (again not enough room to talk all about OCD, but if you want to learn more or chat with me about other mental health things, please let me know 😊)

At Iowa State I again attended lots of campus ministry worship experiences and found almost all my friendships through those places. I also had the opportunity to take quite a few religion courses from professors who either would not call themselves Christian, or at least not the kind of 'Christian' I was familiar with. At that stage in my life, I was still feeling pretty confident in what I thought were the right answers and confused by how others came up with different ideas. Now this doesn't mean I didn't struggle with doubts about the whole God thing overall, but that didn't stop me from striving to be "right" in what I believed. (and also knowing who was "wrong", in a nice way of course).

So that really covers the first 25ish years of my Christian faith walk. 25 years ago this month I was an inexperienced youth pastor in Worthington, MN, getting prepared to lead my first youth mission trip to Colorado 🙄🙄🙄. Lesley and I also got engaged that Summer in Okoboji and got married the next June, then it was back to Denver the next Summer for the two of us and time for me to start seminary.

Now some of you might be aware of the old cliché about seminary being the place where people go and their faith dies, even using a little word play and calling it 'cemetery'. This is not how I would describe what happened to me but it does generally mark the time of my life where I was opened up to more ideas about the Christian faith.

There is not just one moment in time where I started to second guess many of those “right” answers that I knew so well in college. In general I would say that it was a slow melting of my very ‘black & white’ faith into this less hard-edge gray faith.

It wasn’t all just in seminary either, that was just the beginning. I continued to learn more about how different kinds of Christians looked at so many challenging topics in our world. And now after serving about 18 years in churches as an ordained minister I often say that I “know” a lot less than I did 25 years ago. This is not saying that my Christian faith is less than it used to be, but it is more open. This kind of talk might make some of my childhood Sunday School teachers and youth leaders nervous because it sounds like I have given up convictions that are very important to them, and I can understand why they would feel that way. There are family members of mine who would also have a problem with my version of the faith. But all the years of being taught and loved by my teachers and family did not go to waste because it still gave me a foundation in the goodness of God and love for one another (even if it didn’t teach me to sing about it very well).

I would say though that my Christian faith has actually become larger in my 2nd 25 years, because it has torn down walls of division that I had because of this or that belief, and instead the focus is on the biggest news of God being for us, and that is really good news because God is Love! And now I am here in Hayfield getting to be a part of a church of diverse beliefs in some areas, but united in faith, love and compassion. It is a good place to turn 50 🥰

Extra note from the pastor:

If there is anyone who would like to have a visit for any reason at all this Summer please don’t hesitate to contact me or a deacon. I would also love to know about the activities the kids of the church are participating in so I can encourage them too!

You can always contact me at 989-359-9206 and vanderwaal02@gmail.com. Also on the topic of the PFP note on page 1, if you would consider making a continual financial commitment to our church through our online portal on our website, it would help our church’s financial health and you don’t have to worry about trying to keep track of when you give.

Thank you for your generosity!

Thank you!
